Note: ånically to denounce spam, advertising and problematic messages (harassment, fights or rude). In the first rounds buying articles for your host seems to be the best strategy than buying packages for random soldiers and, hopefully, Hå © Roes. This is because you are looking for specific soldiers to polish your stratum, and you have a quite thin probability of getting them. The demians (especially the common ones) are not too much and even if you implement them, later will have to sell them for 25% of the initial price, which is quite inefficient. However, you can keep your articles for quite some time. Classified people seem to be better than melee due to the upper range. They end up causing greater damage in general. Consider to be the first level Hå © Roe at this time å "great sources" of the distant of the AOE. Midas hand is a good early game element to increase your income. In addition, the attack speed is always å Etíl. Moonshard is a universally å Etíl that gives the majority of the attack speed, and combined with some elements of Daå ± 0 and skills that Buffs its Hå © ROE DPS is a great business. Bloodthorn is the most important element of the late game and usually want to get at least two or three copies of it. Was it manually "not" overlapping the duration, if you will ensure that the debuff is always in the unit that you are trying to kill. Look for a source of control: you can't trust only in the Daaves. You need a little soldiers/hs/articles that slow down and stun the incoming fluid waves. This is ... extremely important for the chief's rounds, since they determine its income, and income is the most important part of beating the game. You can reposition your units with a TP scroll or travel boots. This is very å 9l1 at the end of the game, especially during Roshan's round. You can tp a powerful Hå © Roe to help a difficult player. difficulties.
